Excitement of the Various Candidates Over the Votes-How They Stand.

Last night was boat club night at the fair, and the rink was densely crowded, but the coating men were few and far between. President Coon, Lieut, Davis, Boatswain Murphy, and several of the Columbia club

Murphy, and several of the Columbia club were present, squandering their cash, but the Analostans and Potomaes did not send large contingents. The fair is now nothing but a decorated poiling place.

Jim Willett and Capt. Miller are the supervisors of election, deputy marshals. judges, clerks, and poll boxes, and they perform their pleasant duty of receiving cash and chalking up the record in a manner at once graceful and satisfactory. There is a good deal of bulldoxing, however, at the polls. It is not cruel, but it is none the less effective. The intimidators are fair young females wearing smiles instead of masks (although the smile is often a mask), and lead pencils instead of shotsome Mark and lead pencils. instead of shotguns. Money is a necessary qualification for the voting privilege, but, instead of paying citizens to cast their ballots, the importunate girls compel them to pay.

the importunate girls compel them to pay. It is a terrible state of affairs, but then the poor disfranchised people of Washington are willing to give anything for the right to east a ballot, and submit without a murmur. One of the peticoated canvassers broke the point of her pencil last night, and The Rayus-LICAN reporter studied the way a determined female sharpens an obstreperous pencil. The young lady opened her knife after numerous attempts, and grasping it tight in her lily white band made a ferocious slash at the unsuspecting cedar. The blade made a break through the woed and suddenly coming out sliced out a little piece of thumb. With an ejaculation the girl made another lunge, and this time out the pencil entirely through. An angry light sprang into her lunge, and this time cut the pencil entirely through. An angry light sprang into her eyes, and she cut and sisahed with the energy of a Keely motor, but to no avail. The point steadily refused to reach the fineness necessary to chirography, and after the pencil had been whittled away, and the wounded thumbs and fingers bound up with court-plaster she borrowed the reporter's pencil and brought it back an hour afterward with the end worn off and the butt chewed up.

THE PAIREST OF THE PAIR. Oh, she is young, and she is sweet, And she is very fair, An astumn sunset's brightest ray Is prisoned in her hair. (Some say she takes it off at night And hangs it on a chair).

Upon her cheek chaste lilles rest, With roses peering through; Her dancing eyes are violets. Brimfut of laughing dew. (Some say she digity uses paint, And belindonna, too).

THE LAW AND THE IMPORTERS. Advantages Taken of the Packing Clause -The Lobster Cans and the Ale Bot-ties. Assistant Secretary French, who is an an fait in all matters pertaining to customs, and duties, and duties, and dues, and regulations, and everything of that sort, has returned from New York, and in conversation with a representative of THE REPUBLICAN, yesterday, remarked that the importers were making a liberal interpretation of the new law for their own benefit. He said the new list of rates and articles dutiable had not yet been prepared for customs officers. The old list holds good until July 1, with everything except sugar. The change of rates on this goes into effect on the first of May, and the new regulations will then be ready.

The change of the tariff law in regard to have a sugar to the ready.

The change of the tariff law in regard to charges on packing, cost of transportation, commissions, and fees, which went into effect on the passage of the act, has caused considerable difficulty which will not be settled for some time. Judge French finds that the importers everywhere are construing the law to make the cost of importation as light as possible. To help them along, the foreign merchants make invoices showing many costs of packing that never appeared on the old invoices when boxes and costs were reckoned in. For instance, when ales and liquors were imported in hogsheads or barrels, no account was taken of the hogshead or barrel and no charge made. Now the cost of the barrel, &c., is put in the invoice, and a reduction demanded on that account. So in everything costs are absurdly the cost of the barrel, &c., is put in the invoice, and a reduction demanded on that account. So in everything costs are absurdly reckoned in order to get reductions—the boards that cloth and lace are rolled upon, the tapes they are tied with, the steazy cloth wrapped around them. Everything is put in and made to help in the general reduction. The cans in which lobsters are imported, and the bottles in which ale comes are made to swell the claims for reduction, and many things upon which no duty was charged under the old law are under dispute. Of course the new law contemplated relief from former charges, and not the granting of reductions on account of articles entering into the detail of packing, which had never figured in any way under the old law.

The department is preparing rules and regulations to govern collectors and appraisers, which will be ready in a few days, but there will be differences upon which questions will come up for rettlement from time to time for months after the new law is in full effect.
